4. Ponomarev A. I. Correlation of the concepts «strategy», «doctrine», «conception» in the context of the theory of national security

Abstract. At the present stage of the development of Russian statehood, the need to create a strategic goal-setting system based on fundamentally new legal and methodological grounds is being actualized. The vector of development of such a system is laid down by the Federal Law of the Russian Federation of June 28, 2014 № 172-FZ «On Strategic Planning in the Russian Federation». Changes in the methodological approaches of strategic planning were followed by changes in the conceptual apparatus, the uniform use of which at different levels and sectors of strategic planning should ensure the development and implementation of agreed goals of state and municipal management. However, we must note that in the use of such key concepts as «strategy», «doctrine», «conception» there is no consensus, because depending on the scope of the synonymous series «strategy-doctrine- conception» is filled with approximately the same content. In order to determine the correlation of these concepts, the author carries out their semantic analysis and reveals the distinctive features that form the essence of each of them. The author proceeds from the fact that the nature of the formulation of goals and their subsequent implementation is largely determined by those distinctive features that form the volume of these concepts, therefore, comprehension of these features should contribute to increasing the effectiveness of strategic goal-setting. In the conclusion of the article, as one of the conclusions reflecting the practical applicability of the results of the study, the author points out that the difference in the semantic meaning of the concepts «conception», «strategy,» and «doctrine» can be used to improve the system of strategic attitudes by defining its levels: conceptual, methodological (strategic) and sectoral (doctrinal-normative).
